

SHEEHAN IN A ROW.

He Tried to Expedite Voting in the Thirteenth District.

Wanted Voters to Have the Option of Refusing Amendment Ballots.

"Wicked" Gibbs, Beckman, Jeroloman and Larocque Oppose Him.

A lively row occurred in the Twenty-fifth Election District of the Thirteenth Assembly District about 10 o'clock this morning. This is one of the largest election precincts in the district, the registration book 33, and Leader John C. Sheehan found there was some danger that all the Tammany votes would not get in.

He ordered his captain in this district, James McShane, to facilitate matters by insisting that voters need not take the Constitutional Amendment ballots unless they wanted to.

In this way it was hoped that the Tammany vote could be run through more expeditiously, for this district is one of the most important strongholds of the Wigwag.

The poll clerks and the Republican election inspectors objected to the proposition, and insisted that each voter should take all the ballots and return them properly folded.

Mr. McShane summoned Mr. Sheehan to his aid, and just at the same time Frederick S. Gibbs, the "Wicked One," and Col. Theodore Hamilton came along, while Candidates Henry B. Beckman and John Jeroloman happened in at the same time with Joseph Larocque, Chairman of the Committee of Seventy.

For ten minutes there was as fine a case of electioneering as one would care to listen to. Meanwhile all voting had been stopped.

The "Wicked" Gibbs got out his pocket manual and read the law to the inspectors and likewise the riot act. He said every voter should be compelled to take all the ballots into the booth and return them properly folded, or the vote would be thrown out.

Mr. Sheehan and the Tammany captain stood up for what they regarded as the rights of the voter and insisted that he could take as many or as few ballots into the booth as he liked, so long as he voted something, and that meant the Tammany ticket.

The Police Club workers were out in force, and they backed up the Police Commissioner and looked for a while as if the 23 voters of the election district who still remained unheard from would be shut out entirely.

The inspectors took a vote on the question and it resulted in a tie. Then, after a consultation among the big guns present, it was decided to let the voting go on, and the Tammany captain declared bitterly against the delay.

The question at issue was not decided, however, and every man who had taken as many ballots as he chose, if he said he would not take them all, his vote was changed and he was compelled to swear it in.

He would then go into the booth with his Tammany banner and vote again inside of two minutes.

CAPT. SLIGOW A PICKPOCKET?

Straw Says the Republican Robbed Him at the Polls.

John J. Sligow, a Republican captain at the polls, 299 William street, in the Second Assembly District, was arrested at noon today charged with picking the pockets of an elector whom he was trying to convert.

Policeman Buckley, who stood at the polls, was attracted by a great racket near by, and saw a man with a blue badge fleeing down William street, pursued by a commonplace citizen, who was shouting "Stop thief!"

The policeman gave chase and overtook the blue badge, which was worn by Capt. Sligow. The pursuer said that he was Florence Straus, employed in the City Court. He declared that as he approached the polls to vote, the captain had greeted him most warmly, trying to win his vote for the Republican ticket, during this interview, Straus declares that the captain snatched a $30 bill from his pocket.

Capt. Sligow was considerably intoxicated, and Justice Ryan put off the hearing until the captain could become sober.

Special Detective Thompson, of the West Forty-seventh street squad, arrested a Republican Inspector of Elections, of the Fifth Election District, of the Nineteenth Assembly District, in Brooklyn Court, this morning, on a charge with being implicated in the election frauds.

Thompson, twenty-eight years old, living at the same address, appeared in court against a disreputable-looking woman who said she was Lizzie O'Hare, and she was committed for trial at $200 bail on the charge of having stolen the property.

O'Hare said she had been living with the woman for the past eighteen months, and that she was a Republican Inspector of Elections, and that she was at work on Saturday last, when she was arrested.

Thompson arrested her at her home last night. Justice McMahon held him for further examination.

Bailly Hurt by a Cable Car.
Thomas H. Vaughn, forty-five years old, of 1122 Second avenue, was knocked down by a Third Avenue cable car at 6 o'clock this morning at the intersection of Second and Third streets. He was severely hurt about the head and body and was removed to Flower Hospital.

Scrofula in the Neck.
"I had a bump on the side of my neck as large as a hen's egg. I was advised to have it cut out, but would not consent. A friend suggested that I take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I am glad to say that I did, and soon the bump disappeared."

Entirely Disappeared.
I can truly praise Hood's Sarsaparilla, an excellent medicine."

WOMEN AS WATCHERS

Mrs. E. B. Grannis Shows that They're a Big Success.

Appointed To, She Quietly Settles a Wordy Controversy.

Republicans Not Thrown Out of 68 Oliver Street This Year.

With a Republican watcher's certificate signed by Chairman Brookfield, a look of determination, a lunch basket and a copy of the election laws, Mrs. E. B. Grannis, the courageous woman reformer, arrived at the polling place at 41 Oliver street, at 6 o'clock this morning.

Mrs. Grannis at the polls. At 6 o'clock she announced that thirty-four had voted and that two had been rejected.

"I have been treated with the greatest consideration," she said to an "Evening World" reporter. "I had been told that two Republican watchers were up to the reporter, and Mrs. Grannis discreetly refrained from saying anything more about the subject.

A few minutes later a longshoreman, with a bunch of ballots in his hands and a look of perplexity, wanted to know just how to fold the tickets.

An election inspector started in to tell him, but a prohibitionist watcher declared he had no right to do so, and in a moment there was an argument in which every one in the room, except Mrs. Grannis and the reporter, took part.

Republican and Democratic watchers waved their arms wildly, the election officers declared they would stand up for their rights and the prohibitionists made as much noise as if his ticket had some show of winning.

Mrs. Grannis simply looked on and smiled. Finally she was asked her opinion, and when she said she didn't see any reason for such a fuss the prohibitionists subsided and the longshoreman was given the information he needed. Just see that," said Mrs. Grannis. "Women as watchers are a success, and I am glad to be the first in the field."

The other Republican watcher at the Oliver street polling place was Maurice J. Kennedy, who said that he was one of the men who was thrown out a year ago. He said he did not expect any trouble this year, however, and that he thought the election would be conducted fairly.

Just around the corner from where Mrs. Grannis was making herself famous, two other women were acting as unofficial watchers at the polling place of the Twenty-first Election District, 41 Oliver street.

SHE NEVER GETS RATTLED.
The polling place is in a seaman's boarding-house, and the line on the street was kept constantly under the eye of the landlady, who watched the proceedings from a second-story window.

An Italian woman stood in the doorway alongside the polling-place, but neither she nor the landlady challenged voters. Both talked to their friends, however, and a Tammany leader said they were doing more effective work for Grant than the entire Woman's Municipal League had done for the other side.

One arrest was reported at 11:30 o'clock. A man wearing one of Ollie Teal's badges was charged with stealing a man's watch.

TRIED TAMMANY TACTICS.
Leader Murphy and Healers at Work in the Fifteenth District.

In the Eighteenth Election District of the Fifteenth Assembly District Building Inspector Peter Murphy, Tammany's district leader, is charged with attempting to enforce Tammany methods early in the day.

He went behind the rail in the polling booth and began to instruct the inspectors. Terry Breslin, a Republican leader, protested. In order to prevent a row the policeman on duty ordered Murphy out.

Several attempts were made to demolish the Republican and Reform pasters booths, but the watchers withstood the attacks until 1 o'clock, when both were demolished.

The Republicans claim it was the work of Tammany heaters and that no efforts were made by the policeman on duty to prevent it.

Other Women Watching the Polls at 41 Oliver Street.
This is where the citizens of the Twenty-second Election District of the Second Assembly District vote, and when Mrs. Grannis arrived she announced that notwithstanding the fact that the Republican watchers there a year ago were thrown out, she was going to remain at the post all day and until the votes were counted to-night.

Her arrival was expected, and when she stepped from the cab to the polling place a rousing cheer of welcome was given by a score of voters waiting for the polls to open. She did not wear the reform dress she advocates, but appeared in a conventional costume, including a new bonnet that must have created envy among the east-side women who glanced in through the window.

Mrs. Grannis thoroughly understood her duties before she arrived and when the polls opened at 6 o'clock she went thrown out from this polling place last year, so I was naturally nervous, but I am getting along finely and the election in this district is going to be honest," she exclaimed, bringing down a gloved hand on the ballot-box to emphasize the remark.

"But there is one thing I want to find out about," continued Mrs. Grannis, lowering her voice to a whisper so she could not be heard by others.

"I want to know if men so under the influence of liquor they don't know what they are doing have the right to vote, reform dress she advocates, but appeared in a conventional costume, including a new bonnet that must have created envy among the east-side women who glanced in through the window.

STUDENTS DEBARRED.

Justice Barrett Decides Against the Theologians.

Forty-nine of Them Stricken from the Registry Lists.

Tutors, However, May Acquire a Legal Residence.

About one hundred students of the General Theological Seminary of the Episcopal Church, in Chelsea Square, marched in double file into the County Court-House at 9 o'clock this morning.

Forty-nine of the students had been served last night with orders issued by Justice Barrett, of the Supreme Court, requiring them to show cause why their names should not be stricken from the registry lists of the Second Election District of the Thirteenth Assembly District.

The orders to show cause, which were secured upon the affidavits of Peter J. Garvey, of 472 West Twentieth street, on the ground that the students named were not legal voters, were made returnable at 10 o'clock, but at that hour Justice Barrett had not put in an appearance.

It is claimed by the students that last year thirty-seven from the seminary voted without question and that of that number twenty are among those included in the forty-nine ordered to show cause to-day.

Justice Barrett arrived at 10:30 o'clock and the argument began. Ex-Judge Arnoux and Lawyer Canfield argued in behalf of the students. It was contended that they occupied a different position from the students of most educational institutions, inasmuch as they paid their board aside from their tuition and many of them remained all the year round.

Counsel for Garvey, who brought the action, contended that under the Constitution no one could gain or lose a residence by entering a seminary of learning.

So far as the cases of Tutor Shepard and Assistant Prof. West were concerned, Justice Barrett said there was no question that they had a right to vote, and in their cases he refused the mandamus.

As to the others, Justice Barrett said that under the Constitution they had not gained a legal residence at the Seminary. He refused, however, to grant the mandamus, ordering the names stricken from the lists, because, he said, action should have been taken sooner.

He said the students could vote if they chose to swear in their ballots, and take their chances on punishment if it developed that they had no right.

Ex-Judge Arnoux said the students did not wish to be placed in that position, and asked for a decision in one specific case, by which the others could be governed.

In that case Justice Barrett expressed the opinion that the student had no right to vote, and ex-Judge Arnoux said that the other students would refrain from voting.

At Justice Barrett's suggestion, ex-Judge Arnoux is to prepare the cases of three of the students for appeal to the Court of Appeals for future government of such cases.
